Description
belongs to #3095
TaxonNodes must only be enabled if a user has the full CRUD permissions on the classification subtree.
Formerly it was not possible to test this feature (" Currently this can not be tested due to the bug #3098 "CdmPermissionEvaluator can test for multiple permissions"), but this requirement is no longer valid, so testing is possible.
Still difficult to test due to #4300 (authority form does not work under windows) for now the user will be granted to edit taxa the user has the permission UPDATE on the cdm entities in question. This can be easily changed afterwards to full CRUD permissions ALL}} since the required permissions are centralized in {{{eu.etaxonomy.taxeditor.security.RequiredPermissions

I am not sure if I understand what is meant here with "enabled".
Currently it seems possible to open a taxon but not to enter data in the details view for the name editor.

But it is possible to add new factual data but not all of them are editable in the details view (e.g. TextData text is not editable while Time scope is editable).
So there seem to be open issues. This is maybe also related to the problem that 2 dimensional rights are currently not yet fully implemented (e.g. rights to enter only factual data for a certain taxonomic subtree).

I give this ticket to KL as she is currently in charge for TaxEditor issues. Please discuss who should work on it. I also change milestone as the old milestone should be removed.

Now it is not possible to enter factual data anymore (this was tested for a user with Editor and Allow_for_Polygonaceae rights in Caryophyllales_spp) it was implemented for #8239
