Description
I observed the following problems while implementing the ExtendedCreatePermissionManager for #6867 when this sequence is used (snipped from CdmStore.java): <pre>T mergedBean = mergedBean(bean); repo.getCommonService().save(mergedBean); session.flush();</pre> the flush causes the bean being saved a second time, since hibernate assumes that the entity is dirty and schedules a save operation. For this save the user would need the UPDATE permission, and the save operation fails.
