Description copied from #7102 :  One more related issue: when adding a taxon or name, the according text fields do not change there size but stay in single line mode. Usually for taxon representation but also for names we need 2 or more lines. It only changes size if resizing e.g. the width of the details view or by reselecting the specimen.  So this and the scrolling issue are remaining from this ticket. Feel free to open new ticket(s) if necessary.

Now, the element is resized after editing.

But I could not reproduce the scrolling bug.

The resizing issue seems to be solved now.

To reproduce the scrolling issue:

- Connect to test-rem_conf_am
- Open Specimen Tree editor
- Search for "A**"
- Select first field unit and slightly change the first record (e.g. change error radius)
- Save => Scrollbar scrolls down

#8 - 06/25/2018 12:07 PM - Patrick Plitzner

This behavior is not reproducible on a Linux machine. On Windows it happens when saving with the "Save" icon but it does not happen when using CTRL+S.

#9 - 06/25/2018 04:00 PM - Patrick Plitzner

- Target version changed from Release 5.1 to CDM UML 5.5

moving this to the next release as it is not critical

#10 - 06/25/2018 07:07 PM - Andreas Müller

- Copied to bug #7512: Saving in Specimen Tree View creates unwanted scrolling on windows added

#11 - 06/25/2018 07:09 PM - Andreas Müller

- Status changed from Feedback to Closed
- Target version changed from CDM UML 5.5 to Release 5.2
- % Done changed from 50 to 100

As the scrolling issue is not related to determination details view I created a new ticket for this issue #7512 and revert target version ("UML" was not the correct one anyway) and close ticket.
