| Currently only aggregated data are not editable (depending on configuration). Also cloned data should not be editable and maybe even not visible as mentioned in #8467 .So we better have 2 configuration parameters, 1 for aggregated descriptions and 1 for cloned descriptions. |              |                          |           |

Descriptions Clones, die an Specimens oder auch Taxa hängen sind derzeit noch normal bearbeitbar.

Sie sollten genauso wie berechnete Daten nicht editierbar sein. Man könnte sogar nachdenken, ob sie eine eigene Präferenz bekommen und per Default unsichtbar sein sollen, nicht nur disabled. Sie werden ja lediglich als Quellen verwendet und müssen daher eigentlich nicht sichtbar sein im Editor. Aber erstmal können wir damit anfangen, das gleiche Prädikat zu verwenden und die Clone genauso zu behandeln wie andere aggregierte Daten.

Beispiele: Fakten an den Specimen BGBM 124 und BGBM 123 in meiner TestDB

#3 - 10/11/2021 04:35 PM - Andreas Müller

- Description updated

#4 - 10/19/2021 03:19 PM - Katja Luther

- Status changed from New to In Progress

Now cloned descriptions are disabled like computed descriptions.

Should we split this ticket?

#6 - 11/02/2021 11:06 AM - Andreas Müller

- Target version changed from Release 5.45 to Release 5.28

This has been partly implemented in 5.28 I think. We should either split the ticket or implement the second part (configuration parameter) also if fast to implement.

I move this to a new ticket. (#9844)
